OFFICE OF THE WING COMMANDER

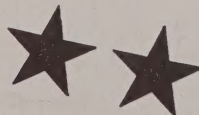

Appreciation for outstanding support and cooperation, plus pride in outstanding accomplishments, inspire my sincere dedication of this Pictorial Review to every member of the 1608th Air Transport Wing and tenant organizations at Charleston Air Force Base.

This Year Book affords me the opportunity to express genuine thanks to both military and civilian personnel of this base for inimitable loyalty and complete support during my assignment as Wing Commander.

While extending personal greetings to military and civilian personnel here, I must also say farewell. It is my sincere hope and earnest desire that you continue to serve the 1608th Air Transport Wing, Charleston Air Force Base and the United States Air Force with industrious effort and high spirit.

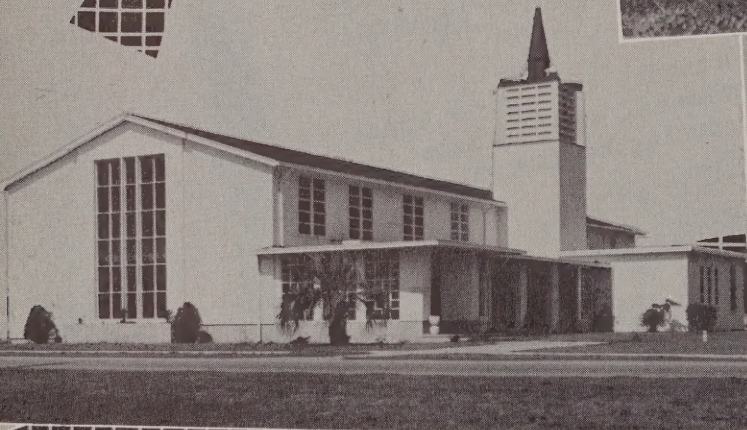

May this book always pleasantly remind you of our stay at Charleston Air Force Base and the people with whom we have served, and may it also remind you of your job, which has been so well done.

MISSION

The primary mission of the 1608th Air Training Wing is to provide airlift support for the Department of Defense and other agencies of the United States government. To effect this it is charged with operating the necessary base functions, aircraft, maintenance facilities, and aerial port to accomplish the mission.

The Wing is responsible for maintaining operational readiness through intensive training; it is organized to provide for sustained operations and mobility and flexibility in keeping with modern military concepts.

The Wing provides logistical support for tenant units including the 444th Fighter Interceptor Squadron, 1968th AACS Squadron, and 792nd AC&W Squadron.

HISTORY

The 1608th Air Transport Wing was activated and assumed command of Charleston AFB on 1 March 1955. At that time the base passed from the Tactical Air Command to the control of the Military Air Transport Service. At activation, the Wing consisted of ten organizations, a number which has almost trebled in less than two years.

One year after activation of the Wing, the base was designated an aerial port of embarkation for overseas traffic and the Wing assumed responsibility from Continental Division for the Caribbean and South American phases of MATS operations.

An extensive construction program, commenced shortly after activation, has provided personnel with an outstanding physical plant, and Charleston AFB has grown in a phenomenally short time into an enormous and vital installation.

Typical construction scene while the Base was being built into one of the most modern bases in the Military Air Transport Service.

444TH FIS

The 444th F.I.S. was activated on 16 February, 1954, as a tenant unit at Charleston AFB, Charleston, S.C. At the present time the 444th FIS is accomplishing a change from F-86D's to the newer, more modern F-86L aircraft.

The F-86L Sabre-Jet is a high-altitude, all-weather interceptor, equipped with radar and an electronic fire control system designed to seek and destroy a target under any weather condition, using twenty-four 2.75 "Mighty Mouse" high velocity rockets. It is capable of exceeding the speed of sound.

Since activation, the 444th has taken an active part as an operational squadron under the Air Defense Command. It has participated in numerous Operational tests, three rocketry meets, and two squadron deployments. It is the winner of the coveted "A" Award, given for outstanding operational readiness scores. This is the first time the award has been given in the Eastern Air Defense Force, and demonstrates the high rate of efficiency present in the squadron.

The 444th has deployed twice to Vincent AFB, Yuma Arizona, for operational rocketry firing, and combat training and tactics, and on both occasions was found to be above average and highly satisfactory.

While standing its around-the-clock alert, the 444th has been responsible for guiding numerous lost and stricken aircraft, both military and civilian, to a safe landing, in many cases just in time to avert disaster, through the use of ground and airborne radar.

Looking at the record of accomplishment of the 444th, it can readily be seen that the squadron is manned by an outstanding group of competent, eager and proud officers and airmen.

FLIGHT ENTERPRISES, INC.

Reduced aircraft down time, reduced general overhead, and savings on ferry costs are being recorded at the Charleston Air Force Base by Flight Enterprises, Inc.

The basic mission of Flight Enterprises at Charleston is to render maintenance and overhaul assistance to the 1608th Air Transport Wing, and thus make available to MATS an increased number of aircraft for their flight operations.

The organization, which presently has 570 employees, is expected to increase to 700 in the near future—with most employees from the Charleston area.

Flight's highly-trained employees take special training courses in aircraft overhaul and maintenance. All employees have graduated or will be graduated from one or more of the courses available at the Base C-121 school.

The kind of varied work being contracted for and delivered by Flight indicates the versatility of the work turned out by the organization. For example, Flight has been awarded numerous contracts to do maintenance work on both C-121 and C-54 aircraft, under both Iran/

Cycle and Mats/Sam concepts of maintenance, as well as Drop-Ins, which include tearing down and reconditioning engines, building-up complete engine assemblies, complete overhaul jobs, corrosion control, and standarization of cabins and flight decks.
